Texas Radio and The Big Beat CD Draws Closer

After a fairly lengthy process Texas Radio And The Big Beat have received the first pressings of their new self-titled album. More than pleased with the results the original line up of Dave Carruthers, Phillip McIntyre and Joe Williams are ready to start playing again to help their new baby on it's way.

Joe in the meantime has been having some success on a different front. His short film Aliens Have Been Tooling Our Sheilas has been playing at the Mandolin theatre in Sydney along with sixties cult movie Barbarella to rave reviews. "Not that that's going to stop me enjoying being back onstage again," Joe said, "especially after the support slot we did with The Saints a little while ago."

"We all felt the band played really well that night," added Phil, "and we're keen to keep right on going."

Texas Radio And The Big Beat have planned to release their album with a show at the Lass O'Gowrie on the twentieth of June, "and there's some talk of organising a tour from Sydney through to Brisbane, but we'll wait and see what happens," Phil said.

Texas Radio and the Big Beat will be releasing their self titled album at the Lass O'Gowrie Hotel on Friday the 20th June 8.30pm to 12.00pm
